What is a bank account

The bank account is a contract with which the bank carries out a cash service for the Client, keeping in custody his savings and managing his money with a series of services (deposits, withdrawals and payments within the limit of the available balance).

The current account is usually connected with other services such as debit cards, credit cards, cheques, bank transfers, domiciliation of payments, credit lines.

The bank account is governed under the general terms of the document "Rules governing the bank accounts and the ancillary services", and, where applicable, the "Passive Bank-Client Agreement" and the "Global Payment Plus and Trade Portal Agreement". The Rules governing the bank accounts and the ancillary services allow the bank to issue, at its sole discretion, credit openings on Client's bank accounts, through the execution of a specific "overdraft credit line" in favour of the Client. The Client may use the amount made available by the bank on one or more times and may restore its availability with subsequent deposits.

The bank has the right to terminate the credit opening at any time (even the credit opening has a fixed maturity date), also through a verbal communication and/or reduce the total amount. From the communication of termination, the availability of the line shall be suspended.

Moreover, the bank has the right to pledge and retain all Client's values and receivables, that are for any reason whatsoever available to the bank or the bank acquires their availability on a later stage, to guarantee all the obligations of the Client towards the bank.

By means of the additional execution of the agreements called "Passive Bank-Client Agreement" and "Global Payment Plus and Trade Portal Agreement", the bank and the Client agree to exchange electronic data via internet through the portal "Commerzbank Corporate Banking Portal" and to manage the current account relationship of the Client and the collection and payment services connected to it by means of electronic flows to be transmitted through this portal. Access to the portal by the Client is authorized by the bank through specific means of authentication, such as, by way of example but not limited to, transaction authorization numbers (photoTAN), personal identification numbers (PIN) and personalized user number.

Risks

The bank account is a safe bank service. The main risk is the counterparty risk, i.e. the risk of the bank not being able to refund the Client, entirely or partially, with the available account balance (therefore the bank takes part in the guarantee funds EDB and EFS as of "Other information" section. More details on the operation of these systems and the maximum guaranteed coverage may be found in the websites <http://www.edb-banken.de/en> (EDB) and <http://en.bankenverband.de/tasks/deposit-protection-scheme/> (EFS).

Other risks may be:

- any eventual negative variation of economic conditions (interest rates and other commissions and expenses), if provided under the contract;
- the application of negative interest credit rates in relation to current account in certain currencies (as, for instance, Euro);
- loss or removal of cheques, debit cards, credit cards, personal data and keywords for online access (if activated), or the suspension or the reduction of service for technical reasons or force majeure.

More information can be found in the "Practical guide to bank account", which helps to choose the right account type, available at www.bancaditalia.it
